

A great day at Parkstone Sea Training School in Dorset --- when the Duke of Edinburgh, as Admiral of the Fleet, paid a visit of inspection to future men of the Royal and Merchant Navies. These bright and happy youngsters form a branch of the famous Dr Barnardo's Homes.

CROSSBOW SHOOTING.

Why --- chase me round the battlements in doublet and hose --- here are citizens of Gubbio in Italy, practising the ancient sport of shooting with a crossbow... a sport where you have to get your eye in before you knock it out.

Just see what yonder knave can do to ~~the target~~ a target, at more than fifty good paces.

And the village maiden says: "Oh, sir --- thou sendest me!"

NAVY ISLANDS

A landmark in a bay off the eastern coast of America, is a man-made island known as Wolf Trap Obstruction. It was part of the United States' Naval Defences in the Second World War. Now it has become just an obstruction to peacetime navigation; so it is being systematically destroyed.

CHURCHILL HOME.

Home again after the holiday in Sicily which followed his resignation from the office of Prime Minister --- Sir Winston Churchill. The veteran statesman has been spending his time on holiday, painting and working on his latest book. To an ordinary man half his age, ~~that's~~ that's a holiday that sounds about the same as hard work.
