

Sir Anthony Eden was given a royal welcome and a civic reception when, for the first time since he became Prime Minister, he visited Leamington --- the constituency he has represented in Parliament ~~since~~ for thirty-two years. In a cheerful speech he said:

And afterwards he waved to the crowds from the balcony of the Town Hall.

POOR MAN'S ART.

In London --- in the Gardens of the Victoria Embankment --- the eighth annual open-air display of paintings organised by the London County Council. It's sometimes known as the ~~British~~ Poor Man's Royal Academy.

Film starlet Kill Adams was among the visitors. She had a chat with Joseph Morton who, with his guide dog "Boxer", was the subject of one of the paintings.

BRIDGE JUMP.

On the Queensborough Bridge --- high above New York's East River --- this was how a man named Romppane from Finland decided to get in the news.

Bridge builders caught him, and he was taken off to see a psychiatrist. They wanted to have his head examined while it was still ~~in~~ in one piece.
