

Now that the Wimbledon fortnight is behind us --- it's interesting to look back and pick out the flashing highlights of the top tennis meeting of the world. Here is Miss Lousie Brough --- in action against Mrs Beverley Fleitz. This Women's Singles Final was all-American.

Towards the end of a hard-fought battle Mrs Fleitz was seen to be tiring. and me she fell ^{leant}

And the Trophy went to Lousie Brough with a victory by 7 - 5, 8 - 6.

Turning to the Men's Singles --- Here 's America's Tony Trabert, nearest the camera, --- on the top of his form against Kurt Nielsen of Denmark.

This was the final rally that gave the victory to Trabert

After those two American victories, there was consolation for Britain in the All-British final of the Women's Doubles. Miss Shirley Bloomer and Miss Pat Ward, meeting Miss Angela Mortimer and Miss Ann Shilcock. And here's a ~~xxx~~ specimen of the vigorous rallies in a lively final.

Here are the winning pair in fast action: Angela Mortimer and ~~Shirley~~, hard-hitting Ann Shilcock.

WINNERS
Now the ~~winner~~ are nearest the camera --- and it's match point.

It was the first All-British Women's Doubles Final since 1929. Well done, indeed!
