

Police in the Galilee district of Israel conducted a search — following an attack on a bus crowded with passengers and the lorry — load of luggage that was with it. At the wheel of the lorry, the driver demonstrated how the lorry's position shielded the passengers as they fled from the bus. The attack was said to be the work of Arab bandits.

CAMBODIA ELECTIONS.

From Cambodia come pictures of the elections in Indonesia. It's an indication of the spreading of the idea of free elections and universal suffrage and it's the first of its kind in this remote corner of the Far East. But it's a complicated idea to put into practice --- in a land of more than forty million voters --- who speak hundreds of different dialects --- and have scores of different political parties.

GERMAN WEATHER ROCKETS.

In the land that first developed the art of using rockets in warfare --- rockets were verboten after the end of the Second World War. But here is a German meteorological station near Hanover, in Western Germany, where they are developing small rockets for weather research.

But --- like the weather itself --- these rockets sometimes do the unexpected.

And --- like all weather experts --- they keep on trying.

GONDOLIERS.

Arriving at London Airport to attend the premiere of the new film Summer Madness are four gondoliers from Venice. The film is a love story. The party is led by Luigi Fasato, who has acted as personal gondolier to Princess Margaret. They were met by London holders of Doggett's Coat and Badge.
