

When the Britannia arrived in Copenhagen, King Frederik of Denmark went on board to greet a royal visitor. The Duke of Edinburgh was to be his guest on a ~~visit~~ visit which was to include occasions both informal and formal. *

Among the first was a look-round at the British Exhibition in the Tivoli Gardens. This Exhibition --- sponsored by the British Import Union and the Federation of British Industries --- follows similar undertakings in previous years, which have done much to foster good trade relations between Britain and Denmark. This year's features included a fashion show.

And the Britannia Inn was an example of the English pub.

Also among the news highlights of the week was the visit to Britain of Russian sailors --- and one of their first duties was the placing of a wreath on the grave of Karl Marx at Highgate Cemetery.

Another contingent marched to the Cenotaph in Whitehall, to pay tribute to Britain's war dead.

They also went to the Mansion House in the City, where they were entertained by the Lord Mayor.

Another Russian occasion was this show put on by the Incorporated Society of London Fashion designers, for the benefit of the Soviet delegation in London - - with the Deputy Chairman of the Council of Ministers.

After the show, the delegates drank a toast.

And now --- to the White City, for one of the most thrilling long-distance races ever seen in this country. There was a bit of fog hanging about on the track --- but there was a bright sparkle, none the less, in the efforts of Gordon Pirie and Ken Norris against the old master --- Emil Zatopek of Czechoslovakia. This was a match between London and Prague, sponsored by the Evening News. After being held in second place for most of ten thousand metres --- Pirie produced this fantastic burst of speed to win.
