

DANUBE FROZEN.

7/2/56.

The icy spell in Europe, has had an unusual effect on the romantic River Danube; It seems that if the Danube is blue, it's blue with cold. At the village of Vilshofen, not far from Munich, heavy ice blocked the flow of the water. The river overtopped its banks, and swept across the neighbourhood. Police came to the rescue with boats --- taking off the villagers whose homes were flooded.

FREEZE UP IN HOLLAND.

From Holland, too --- comes a story of the cold wave. Fishing boats returning to the North Sea Harbours, looked as if they'd been to the Antarctic.

In Amsterdam, a fire broke out in a wool warehouse. And the fireman's dangerous job was, for once, a cold one, too. The temperature was ten degrees below zero.
