

At the little village church at Holkham, in Norfolk, the lovely young bride on whom the sun smiled was Lady Anne Coke --- arriving with her father, the Earl of Leicester.

It will be remembered that Lady Anne was one of the retinue of beautiful f girls who were Maids of Honour at the Coronation of Queen Elizabeth in Westminster Abbey.

The bridegroom was the Honorable Colin Tennant, eldest son of Lord Glenconner. And on this occasion, the bride, ~~whose gown was of white organza and silk~~, had her own attendants --- bridesmaids and pages chosen from the younger relatives of the two families.

Queen Elizabeth the Queen Mother and Princess Margaret ~~were~~ were among the guests, at this little church wedding; guests composed of the members of aristocratic and fashionable ~~families~~ families and the people of this tiny, Norfolk village which is the family home of the Leicesters.

Another social occasion for Princess Margaret was the Red Hat Ball in London --- an annual charity dance held in aid of the Christ Church United Clubs of south-east London. ~~In our picture, Princess Margaret is dancing with Mr Charles Smith Byland.~~
