

C-PP221

(6). TITLE.:- ROVER SCOUTS.

Picture.:- Of course, these lads are not old enough to remember the war. It's history to them.

Nevertheless they've learnt all about the great --

--sacrifices made by those who went before. As a token of appreciation and respect they place at the Cenotaph a wreath which is a floral replica of the honoured Rover Scouts' Badge. It is well that the growing generation should remember the War, for,--

--as the Prince of Wales said, "When we forget the last war, we shall be in danger of another." Let us help the younger ones to remember --

--so that they, in their time, shall not suffer as their --

--elders suffered in those awful war years. Their elder brothers died for England, and for the -- --freedom of the future generations. May the sacrifice be not in vain.